

Reimagining Work and Learning

for the prosperity of people,
firms and communities

SPRING 2008

CORPORATION FOR A SKILLED WORKFORCE

Hands-on Policy, Research, and Practice Designed for Your Community

CSW partners with government, business and community stakeholders to make work work in the global economy.

CSW partners with leadership at all levels to make work work in the global economy.

CSW's Human Capital Team works with policy makers to design strategies that help vulnerable workers succeed. We are partnering with the state of Michigan to launch a new approach to adult learning, and with Oklahoma to build career pathways with higher skills for low-wage workers. In partnership with Experience Works, CSW is exploring new ways to engage mature individuals in work and learning and to help people learn how to better survive economic downturns.

CSW's Business and Industry Strategies Team works with public- and private-sector leadership and key stakeholders at a state and local level to design and implement targeted industry strategies. We have worked with over 12 states to help advance regionally targeted industry strategies, including a multi-state project in partnership with the National Governors Association and the National Network of Sector Partners. CSW also works with public and private partners to research and promote innovative employer practices around work and learning with specific emphasis on integrated talent management strategies.

People and organizations are connecting in new ways: sharing information, creating new knowledge, and driving change. CSW's Community Initiatives Team helps communities leverage new tools and build cross-disciplinary networks to advance shared goals, through WIRED, BRAC and other regional change efforts.

As global economics and new technologies change the way we live, work, and learn, CSW addresses these changes with innovative, collaborative, and inclusive transformation strategies.
